FROM THE DIRECTOR

2016 marked HEUNI's 35th year of activity, and the Institute continued with its ambitious programme of activity. Several publications were produced, including the international HESTIA study on an emerging form of crime, exploitative sham marriages; a study on how ferry companies can contribute to the prevention and identification of trafficking in persons; a study on human trafficking and labour exploitation; and a report prepared together with the UNODC on crime and gender.

The year was also marked by staffing changes, as two long-serving HEUNI staff members, senior researcher Markku Heiskanen and senior programme officer Terhi Viljanen reached the age of retirement. They have to a large degree shaped HEUNI's profile of activities and cemented its international reputation, providing the Institute with a good basis on which to go forward.

At the same time as we thank both Dr Heiskanen and Ms Viljanen and wish them all the best for a well-deserved retirement, we would also like to thank the members of HEUNI's Advisory Board for stimulating discussions, and all those with whom HEUNI has partnered in its international projects.

Helsinki, 3 January 2017

Matti Joutsen Director

1. HEUNI'S OPERATIONAL FRAMEWORK

The European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations (HEUNI) is the regional European link in the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme Network. HEUNI was established through an Agreement between the United Nations and the Government of Finland signed on 23 December 1981 and extended on 14 April 1987.

The primary objective of HEUNI, as outlined in the Agreement, is to promote the international exchange of information on crime prevention and control among European countries. The frame of reference is given by the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, as determined by the United Nations Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, although mandates are also received directly from the countries served by HEUNI.

HEUNI's activities are constantly evolving, which is a reflection of the changing nature of crime, of the national and international response to crime, and of the structure for international decision-making relevant to crime and criminal justice. Among the more significant developments in HEUNI's thirty years of operations have been the following:

- the restructuring of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme (1991-1992);
- the political changes in Europe, in particular during the 1990s;
- the continuous expansion of the Council of Europe;
- the expansion of the European Union and its heavy involvement in criminal justice (in particular since 1995); and
- the entry into force of the UN Conventions on Transnational Organized Crime and on Corruption (2003 and 2005, respectively).

As the European regional institute in the UN Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, HEUNI is in a unique position. It serves a region with an exceptionally active criminological community, with a number of different legal systems, and with governments that are relatively receptive to research and innovation in criminal justice. HEUNI also serves a region that has two major intergovernmental organizations that have fostered international cooperation also in criminal justice: the Council of Europe and the European Union.

Europe thus forms a hothouse for innovation in national and international criminal justice, and for innovation in research. The lessons learned in Europe, and the good practice developed in Europe, may have wider application. HEUNI has sought to identify these and, through the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, bring them to the attention of the world community.

HEUNI's primary form of activity is the conduct of research projects, either independently or in cooperation with other institutions and individual researchers. HEUNI also at times organises international seminars as well as smaller expert meetings on specific themes. Furthermore, HEUNI participates in technical assistance projects involving, for example, the provision of expertise or the organisation of training.

The topics of the research projects, seminars and expert meetings are selected on the basis of two primary criteria, (1) the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme and (2) issues of priority for the European region.

HEUNI has also assisted the United Nations Secretariat in the drafting of various documents for submission to the policy-making bodies of the United Nations, including the Crime Commission and the quinquennial United Nations Congresses on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

Similarly, HEUNI has been actively assisting in the development of the United Nations structure for international co-operation, and in assisting the Crime Commission with its work. HEUNI has, for example, coordinated cooperation within the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme Network of Institutes, which has expanded to include eighteen entities around the world.

HEUNI also seeks to strengthen the ties between the work of the United Nations and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organisations, such as the European Union, the Council of Europe, the OECD, the OSCE and the Council of Baltic Sea States as well as various national agencies in this field. The topics of the projects fall within the framework of the priorities set by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

2. HEUNI'S ORGANISATION AND FINANCING

The administrative responsibility for HEUNI lies with the Government of Finland. All members of the staff are Finnish government officials. The budgetary responsibility for HEUNI lies with the Government of Finland. The Government of Finland covers the costs of the premises of HEUNI, the salary of the permanent staff members as well as part of the basic administrative costs of carrying out the programme of activities.

In recent years, many HEUNI projects have been conducted on the basis of funding from, among others, the European Commission, the Fundamental Rights Agency, the Council of Europe, the United Nations, and the Nordic Council of Ministers.

The Agreement encourages the Governments of the countries served by HEUNI to participate in, and support the activities of the Institute. These contributions have been utilized to finance earmarked international co-operation projects, in particular to secure the services of ad hoc experts, consultants and project co-ordinators appointed by HEUNI.

3. HEUNI ACTIVITIES IN 2016 AND THE 2017 WORK PROGRAMME

3.1. General comments regarding HEUNI's projects and tasks

A number of projects are being carried out at HEUNI. Some of them belong under the umbrella of more permanent commitments while others are independent ad hoc efforts.

The longer term commitments include the European Sourcebook on comparative crime and criminal justice statistics, as well as support to the sessions of the UN Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the quinquennial UN Crime Congresses.

3.2. Projects completed in 2016

3.2.1. Preventing Human Trafficking and Sham Marriages: A Multidisciplinary Solution (HESTIA)

HEUNI participated in a project entitled "Preventing human trafficking and sham marriages – A multidisciplinary solution". The objectives of the project were to create a shared understanding of a new, evolving form of trafficking in human beings through sham marriages, provide a definition of sham marriages as a form of human trafficking, and initiate comprehensive action for its prevention. HEUNI's main tasks were: to develop the research methodology and to train the researchers involved in the project, to attend the national roundtables in different countries involved in the project, to publish a research report and to participate in the development of training material.

The coordinator of the project was the Latvian Ministry of Interior and the partners were HEUNI, Shelter "Safe House" (a Latvian NGO), Living for Tomorrow (an Estonian NGO), Lithuanian Caritas, Immigrant Council of Ireland and the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic.

Funding: European Commission's Programme on Prevention of and Fight against Crime

Duration: 2015-2016

3.2.2. Addressing Human Trafficking in the Baltic Sea

HEUNI participated in a project entitled "Nordic-Baltic Partnership with Passenger Ferry Companies to Encounter Trafficking in Human Beings on the Baltic Sea", coordinated by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and supported financially by the Nordic Council of Ministers. HEUNI's main responsibility was to carry out research on the linkages between human trafficking and the ferry industry, and how the ferry sector could participate in the prevention of trafficking. The main outcome of the project was a HEUNI study entitled "Addressing Human Trafficking in the Baltic Sea" and released on the 20th of September 2016. The report sheds light on how human trafficking is related to the ferry industry, in particular in the Baltic Sea region. The report also looks at what ferry staff already know about human trafficking. The research confirms that the prevention of trafficking as such has not been prioritised by ferry companies in the region, although the corporate social responsibility strategies of many of the ferry operators do emphasise safety and security, in particular. Accordingly, one of the main conclusions of the research was that while human trafficking might not be one of the most topical problems in relation to the ferry industry in the Baltic Sea at the moment, the prevention of trafficking and related phenomena could become incorporated as a more integral element of the ethical and social responsibilities of the ferry companies. In order to increase the awareness of passenger ferry staff on human trafficking and smuggling of migrants, the International Organization for Migration (IOM) is launching a series of trainings for ferry staff. HEUNI and IOM organized the first such training session in October 2016.

Funding: Nordic Council of Ministers

Duration: 2015-2016

3.2.3. Men, Women and Crime – Global and European Crime Statistics

HEUNI was collaborating with the UNODC in producing a report on men and women in crime statistics. Two summary reports appeared as Policy Briefs at the Thirteenth United Nations Congress, in April 2015. The Policy Briefs on homicide and trafficking in human beings looked at the relationship between gender and the commission of crime, and gender and interaction with the criminal justice system at the different stages of the procedure.

The full report on the topic was published in the end of 2016. In addition to the assessment of the current data available at the international level on gender and crime based on the UN CTS, the report includes an assessment of data on the European level from the European Sourcebook on crime and criminal justice statistics.

Funding: HEUNI

Duration: 2014-2016

3.2.4. Exploiting vulnerable migrant workers: a study of trafficking in human beings for the purpose of forced labour in Finland

Natalia Ollus defended her doctoral thesis on 2 December 2016 at the University of Turku. Her thesis "From forced flexibility to forced labour: the exploitation of migrant workers in Finland" finds that the exploitation of migrant workers – and ultimately trafficking for the purpose of forced labour – is structural within the framework of dual labour markets and the current economic and political framework. Exploitation is also made structural through a lack of adequate control and sanctions against those who exploit them. Exploitation is not adequately recognized and addressed by (crime) control authorities, partly resulting from complex and overlapping criminal provisions. The research suggests that the notions of the continuum and cumulation of exploitation could assist in conceptualising the dimensions of exploitation. The research also proposes that the categorisation of 'exploitative crimes and harms of the employer' should be used within the framework of corporate crime research to expand the scope of corporate crimes to incorporate comprehensive infringements by employers of the rights of individual workers.

The study analyses transnational human trafficking and exploitation processes, the role of organised crime in trafficking activities, the agency of the victims and control imposed on the victims by the perpetrators. Ms Viuhko's doctoral studies are carried out at the University of Helsinki. Ms Viuhko was a member of "Russia in Europe – Doctoral Programme in Border Studies" coordinated by the University of Eastern Finland in 2010-2013.

3.3.3 Effectiveness of the Finnish Legislation on Identifying and Supporting Victims of Trafficking in Persons

The so-called Reception Act (746/2011) of Finland contains provisions on the identification of and support for victims of trafficking. The Parliament of Finland has called for review of implementation of the Act to ascertain its efficiency and effectiveness from the point of view of the recovery of the victims of trafficking in persons. The project is designed to study how the provisions on identification and support are applied, what problems of application arise in practice, and what are the consequences of such problems not only to the individual victim, but also on the general structural level (effective action against trafficking in persons). The study will seek to identify legislative gaps and challenges in the interface of the Reception Act with other legislation, and identify alternatives for solving these challenges.

3.4. Plans and Developments for 2017

3.4.1. Sovereignty, Democracy and the EU

The Law Institute of Lithuania has proposed development of a project in response to the "Democratic Discourses and the Rule of Law" Horizon 2020 call for proposals (opened 4 October 2016). The background to the proposal is the crisis of legitimacy in the EU following for example the seeming failure of the European Stability Mechanism and the Fiscal Compact, and the challenges posed for example by the refugee crisis. One result has been a crisis in democratic governance in some Member States, with politicized debates on fundamental issues of the locus and exercise of popular sovereignty and legitimacy. The project will tentatively address two dimensions, that of sovereignty and democracy, and that of legitimacy through the rule of law, the delivery of justice and fundamental rights.

Application for funding: Horizon 2020

Estimated duration: 2018-2019

Partners: Law Institute of Lithuania; they have approached the FIDUCIA partners for expressions of interest.

3.4.2. Actions addressing trafficking in human beings, in particular the integration and the safe and sustainable return of victims of trafficking in human beings (Make It Work)

HEUNI had been part of a consortium that had submitted a project proposal to the European Commission Directorate-General on Migration and Home Affairs designed to development sustainable schemes for the integration of victims of trafficking from among migrants and refugees, the vulnerable nature of this group to exploitation in high-risk sectors of European economies, and the limited capacity and the knowledge of trafficking in human beings (THB) within migration and asylum processes. The main objective of the project was to contribute to enhanced action by participating EU MS to prevent THB for labour exploitation within EU asylum and migration processes by supporting refugees and migrants access safe integration channels in host society labour markets, and to enhance the identification and protection of adult victims of trafficking for labour exploitation in high-risk sectors.

Although the proposal was not accepted, it was evaluated highly. The International Centre for Migration Policy Development has therefore proposed that the proposal be reworked and resubmitted in response to an appropriate call.
